Financial Helpline Support

How do I access the Financial Helpline Support team?

Please call us, and our team will book you for the next available telephone appointment.

What can I expect from my Financial Helpline Support appointment?

The TELUS Health Financial Helpline Support offers confidential help from a financial counsellor. Your counsellor will assist you in explore your financial concerns and assess where you are financially. They will then provide you with the tools and information you need to create a money plan. Should you need further support, our financial counsellors are also able to provide you with hardship contacts, or refer you to ongoing face-to-face financial counselling.

Please note: Financial Helpline Support offers assistance from a financial counsellor, not a financial advisor. It is not a financial planning service and it does not provide short-term credit, finance for employees or negotiate with employers on an employee's behalf.

What is the difference between a financial counsellor and financial advisor?

Our financial counsellors analyse your finances and provide you with options to manage your debt and/or budget. They do not advise or tell you what to do with your finances (i.e. offering investment advice). Financial counsellors are employed by government-funded, not-for-profit, community-based agencies. These agencies do not receive any grants, sponsorship or commission from other businesses or services outside of the government sector. They are entirely independent, so there is no conflict of interest, and they can act only in your best interest.

All our financial counsellors are professionally trained and are required to belong to various state financial counselling bodies. The Australian national peak body is Financial Counselling Australia. The national peak body in New Zealand is FinCap.
